It is worth to wait 5 motherly myths Ancient myths hint at the fact that the Greeks and Romans celebrated Mother's Day by honoring the goddess Cybele, atstutting the Great Mother earth and the goddess of fertility, and Rhea, the mother of the gods. 6 Mother's Day for Peace social activist Julia Ward Howe first brought the idea of Mother's Day to the United States after the Civil War, but Howe's version was very different from the flower-and-embrace version we know today. Howe wrote a Mother's Day statement and introduced Mother's Day for Peace, in which women will protest against the war. Some groups still observe the holiday this way, one of the most famous being the huge crowd of women who gathered outside the Lawrence Livermore Library at the University of California in 1982 to protest nuclear weapons. 7 Fight for Your Rights The current version of Mother's Day was launched by Anna Jarvis in the early 1900s, according to Today. Jarvis got Congress to recognize the holiday, founded the Mother's Day International Association and even trademarked the phrase Mother's Day. Jarvis was inspired by her own mother, who called for Mother's Day to improve conditions for soldiers on both sides during the Civil War. Less than a decade after she fought so hard to make it happen, Anna Jarvis ended up disdaining the holiday she helped popularize, according to Mental Floss. She spoke vehemently over the commercialization of Mother's Day, called for its demise and was arrested during one of her protests in 1948. 9 Mother's Day Around World Mother's Day is the third most popular holiday in the world, the second only Christmas and Easter. Other countries are celebrating their own versions of Mother's Day. Here are some facts about the history of Memorial Day and how it evolved during its 150 odd years. 1. Several cities claim to be the birthplace of Memorial Day. According to the Library of Congress, President Lyndon Johnson declared Waterloo in New York the birthplace of Memorial Day, referring to the celebration the city had in 1866. However, it is known that other places celebrated the holiday earlier and exactly where the first celebration took place remains in dispute. 2. It was originally called Decoration Day. The feast was celebrated decorating the graves of fallen soldiers with flowers, flags, and more, hence the name Of The Day decoration. Over time, it became known as Memorial Day. Getty Images 3. Union General John A. Logan founded the holiday. Although people have already unofficially decorated the graves of fallen Civil War soldiers, General Logan officially began his leave, he called for it to be respected on 30 June. After the Single Monday Holiday Act took effect in 1971, however, it was moved to the last Monday in May. 5. Logan may have chosen 30. The date was chosen because it was not the anniversary of any battle especially-well, according to legend, it is. Getty Images 6. It's customary for an American president or vice president to give a speech. And traditionally, that speech is delivered at the tomb of an unknown soldier at Arlington National Cemetery. Ahead of Memorial Day weekend, the third American infantry also place American flags ahead of Arlington's 260,000 graves and niches. Initially, only soldiers who died in the civil war were honored. After The Second World War, however, the holiday began to involve members of the U.S. armed forces who had come into any conflict. This day is also known as Armistice Day. In 1921, an unknown American soldier from World War I was buried in Arlington National Cemetery. Similarly unknown soldiers were buried in England at Westminster Abbey and in France near the Arc de Triomphe. All of these memorials were held November 11 to commemorate the end of the war to end all wars. In 1926, Congress decided to honor combatants in both World Wars. One year after the end of World War II, a veterans group called the National Veterans Day with a parade and festivities in honor of veterans. He decided to name it Veterans Day. So began the tradition of a single day in honor of all veterans. Not just the end of World War II in 1945. Congress officially passed a bill declaring November 11 as Veterans Day. Because of his role in creating this national holiday, Raymond Weeks became the Veterans' Day Parade Media Personality. Raymond Weeks died in November 1999. In 1968, Congress renamed the national commemoration of Veterans Day to the fourth Monday in October. However, the meaning of November 11 was such that the changed date never really got set. In 1978, Congress returned the observance of Veterans Day to its traditional date. National ceremonies commemorating Veterans Day occur annually in a memorial amphitheatre built around the Tomb of the Unknown. At 11 a.m. on November 11, a color guard representing all military services carries out simultaneous weapons in the tomb. Then the presidential vich is laid on the grave. Eventually, the bugler plays taps. Every day of veterans should be a time when Americans stop and remember the brave men and women who risked their lives for the United States of America. As Dwight Eisenhower said: ... it is good for us to pause, to acknowledge our debt to those who have paid such a large share of the price of freedom. As we stand here in a grateful memory of the contributions of veterans, we renew our beliefs about individual responsibility to live in a way that promotes eternal truths on which our nation is founded and from which all its power and all its greatness flow. Veterans Day is confused with Memorial Day. Observed annually on the last Monday in May, Memorial Day is a holiday set aside to pay tribute to those who died while serving in the U.S. Military. Veterans Day pays tribute to all the people - living or deceased - who served in the military. In this context, Memorial Day events are often more somber in nature than those held on Veterans Day. On Memorial Day, 1958, two unidentified soldiers were interred at Arlington National Cemetery, which died in World War II and the Korean War. In 1984, an unknown soldier who died in the Vietnam War was placed next to the others. However, this last soldier was later exhumed, and he was identified as Air Force 1st Lieutenant Michael Joseph Blassie. That's why his body was removed. These unknown soldiers are a symbol of all Americans who gave their lives in all wars. To honor them, the Army Honor Guard keeps a day and night vigil. Witnessing a change of guard at Arlington National Cemetery is a truly poignant event. Updated by Robert Longley Longley
